In fact, by the end of the twentieth century, multinational companies had established Bangalore as their headquarters, and since then the city has re-established itself as India's Silicon Valley. With a strong academic and R&D background, a leading startup environment, over 27,00,000 IT workers, and the fastest expanding market in Asia, Bangalore is one of the largest tech hubs in South India and becomes the best choice for setting up an office space for business.

Meanwhile, Bangalore is experiencing the highest level of leasing activity in India. The leasing market is dominated by demand from various firms. It is also found that co-working or managed office firms are the segments that disrupted commercial real estate recently, and the high competition amongst them is causing an increase in rent and decrease in vacancy rates. But this increased demand was slowly met by the arrival of multiple office spaces for rent in Bangalore. Today, the outer ring road is the most sought-after micro-market for office space. It leads the leasing activity with companies like HPE, Swiggy, HSBC, Deloitte, Paypal, Samsung, Cognizant, and Google being the highest takers of space in this micro-market. Whitefield and North Bangalore are also witnessing high leasing activity, making Bangalore the ideal location for office spaces.
