Blackpool, England Mar 14, 2022 (Issuewire.com) - Often the world asks, "Are Cricket and Indians separate?" But the question itself is not just a question; it is an expression of the impact this sport has had on Indians spread worldwide.

Cricket flows in the blood of every Indian, and thus this sport enjoys a celebrated status in the country. Not just that, India is a significant hub for cricket lovers, and the game is also played in every alley of India irrespective of the village, town, or metro city. Cricket was not originated in India but see the magic of this sport as India is the biggest country in the world where cricket is played. No, it would not be wrong to say that cricket has transcended into the DNA of every Indian. And, Therefore, every Indian carries an innate attraction towards cricket and his love for cricket with him wherever he goes under the sun.

Gagandeep Singh is no exception to those Indians carrying extreme love for the sport called cricket. Although he was not raised in India, cricket found him where he resided on earth - Kenya. What if he could not be called an Indian cricketer? The vital thing here is he not only plays cricket at the local and international level for Kenya, but he's also working hard to revive its status as a significant sport throughout Africa.

Achieving success in any field requires the right combination of dedication, talent, and hard work. For Gagandeep Singh, combining these traits with a passion for cricket has allowed him to achieve many things in his 29 years.

At first, Gagandeep's age was his biggest obstacle. The young player had to wait several years to get professional training because he was old enough to join a cricket club. But rather than letting this minor roadblock hinder him, he made the most of his situation, watching coaches train other players and learning from their techniques so that by the time he was old enough to play professionally, he was ready and raring to go.

Once on the pitch, Gagandeep Singh proved himself and went from a young boy with a dream to a fully-fledged cricketer and captain at just 19 years old, and since then, he's been breaking records left and right. A veteran of teams like Sikh Union Club, Kenya A-Champs, and Kenya Emerging International Team, Gagandeep has had a long history of leading his team to victory after victory. It must be a proud feeling for Indians to see one of them elevating the ladder of success in a foreign country. It's an honor to be in such great company, but you don't get there by playing it safe—that's why Gagandeep has no plans of slowing down anytime soon. He further wishes to play as an International Kenyan Cricketer.

Gangandeep Singh, one of the most promising cricketers to emerge from the African continent in recent years, is making no compromises in his quest to establish himself as a household figure in the sports world. Simba Sports and Valiant have appointed him as a brand ambassador for their respective companies. For those who are unfamiliar with the term, Valiant is an Indian sports company that makes sporting goods and apparel.

Recent developments include signing an exclusive deal for the America Premier League Academy (APLA). It is an advanced cricket institution that will help spread the game across the African continent's hinterland. Additionally, the APLA will develop and nurture aspiring and outstanding cricketers from throughout the whole continent of Africa. The APLA's creation is in the final stage, and the organization will be officially inaugurated this year at the Sir Ali Muslim Club in Nairobi.
