Jacksonville, Florida Mar 10, 2022 (IssueWire.com) - Depression can be overwhelming. Especially when you're in the midst of it, you can feel like the only person in the world that is struggling, which can make you feel very alone. Learning how to recognize it and deal with it day after day can make all the difference. The good news is depression is treatable. Just because you're struggling with depression doesn't mean that you need to continue the fight alone. Well, meet singer and songwriter Paul Askew, who shares his story in his hit single "Save Me."

Paul Askew, established a powerful soundscape spreading its message across the world. His first new single has hit the Top 150 Independent DRT Chart within its first week. The artist has received major support and uplifting kind words around Paul's courage to deliver such a powerful melody about his deliverance from depression. His brand-new single "Save Me" talks about his faith and how God guided him throughout his life saving him from all the bad things in life. He explains that he went through many difficulties in life and it was God who gave him the courage to stay strong and overcome his difficulties in life.

Just to name a few of the celebrities uplifting the artist and supporting his new single they consist of: legendary gospel artists such as Dorinda Clark Cole and Kim Burrell. American singer, songwriter, television personality, actor, and entrepreneur Ray J. Legendary music industry executives such as Deb Antney, who is the Founder and CEO of Mizay Entertainment, an Atlanta-based management company with clients including Gucci Mane, Nicki Minaj, and French Montana.

Paul is not new to the music industry. He has 20 plus years in the music industry. He started back in 2002, and then decided to take a break to focus on several things during his fight with depression which consisted of:

- Taking the time to do things for himself
- Using the treatment options that were available to him
- Focusing on his physical health

Finally, he's focusing on staying connected to one thing which he's very passionate about which is music. We can expect to hear more great music from Paul this year in 2022. He's a multi-genre artist who has a lot to bring to the table, who doesn't want to be stuck inside of a box. The artist own 's his own record label which is called PaulPaulmusic located in Jacksonville, Florida. He even has his own clothing line which he's launching. Now, that's a complete package and a strong comeback for any independent music artist. The single "Save Me ", is currently out now on all streaming platforms. You can also request the single on the airwaves. On March 15th, at 8 pm eastern standard time you can check out the live interview with Paul Askew on Instagram Live with Gospel Grind Radio.
