Buying and selling pre-owned timepieces is a trend everyone is catching up with. Since luxury products are so high-end, the whole trading process can be difficult, unless you go in the right direction. It is pleasing to know that things have started to evolve with the advent of the Second Movement, built with a solid foundation and proficiency in luxury retail. The platform truly upholds international quality standards with a certified service center, two-year warranty, a guarantee of authenticity, and hassle-free return policy. For decades, pre-owned watches depreciation set off an alarm for everyone, but now with a structured method of buying and selling watches, those fears are put to rest once and for all.

With luxury watch owners continuing to look up for trade, the buying demand for second-hand watches is growing tremendously and the catalog of the Second Movement constantly evolves with the passing time. A large selection of pre-owned watches includes Patek Philippe watches, Bvlgari watches, Audemars Piguet watches, and many other popular brands and models. Each item is examined by discerning eyes for authenticity, quality, and functionality. The watches that passed the evaluation phase are brought to optimum operating standards, without making any compromise to their value. With a refurbishing of each item, they take complete charge for its performance and reliability for at least two years, just like a warranty comes with a brand-new watch.

Selling watches on Second Movement is an easy four-step procedure. At first, pick the watch you wish to sell through an online interactive form, mention relevant details, and you will get an estimation within 24 hours. Then, if you're satisfied with the quote, the specialist will reach out to you to get your item examined. Once they receive your watch, in-house qualified experts will check its condition and authenticity. After everything is evaluated, they make an assessment for the offer price to finalize the purchase. Lastly, you will receive payment via cheque or credit note. With Second Movement, you can stay rest assured knowing a specialized team is working dedicatedly to serve your passion for pre-loved luxury watches.
