

Extreme Wrestling Documentary Now In Production on Ten Year Anniversary of the Controversial Extreme Reunion

Los Angeles, California Apr 29, 2022 (IssueWire.com) - Joe Dombrowski, under his Pro Wrestling Library streaming brand, has announced he is in production of a yet-to-be-titled documentary feature designed to take an in-depth look at the pro wrestling company Extreme Rising.

The documentary will take a critical and objective look at the company, the stories, recollections, ambitions, in-ring talent, the diehard wrestling fan base, and the legacy left behind.

Extreme Rising (originally Extreme Reunion) brand launched in April 2012 in an effort to fill the void in the marketplace that left many fans of hardcore, violent, adult-oriented wrestling they grew up with, unsatisfied. With the goal of being the spiritual successor of the popular Extreme Championship Wrestling (ECW), and on the heels of the success of similar reunion events, WWE's "One Night Stand" and "Hardcore Homecoming", Extreme Rising hoped to use a combination of extreme legends and up-and-coming talent that embodied the hardcore spirit to forge a new roster and develop a touring pro wrestling promotion. With a management team with big ideas and a sold-out first event, Extreme Rising seemed destined to become an overnight success. But almost immediately, setbacks, controversies, and conflicts cracked a would-be solid foundation and started a chain reaction becoming one of the wildest and most outlandish legacies of any pro wrestling start-up promotion.

This documentary investigates the inner workings of the ambitious wrestling company, as it examines the thirst for violence and bloodshed, polarizing personalities, controversial decisions, and the fans' enthusiasm and involvement. This film will trace the successes, failures, risks, mistakes, and demise of the ironically named Extreme Rising brand.

Production began in 2021, as producer Joe Dombrowski searched for a new challenge of a yet-to-be-uncovered story to be told, in the midst of a halted wrestling industry during the Covid-19 pandemic. Pro Wrestling Library is in production, and film, with a release date to be announced.

Dombrowski's vision is to produce a thought-provoking, entertaining, and cautionary presentation for wrestling fans, and those interested in a peek behind the curtain of the frantic, chaotic, and dysfunctional journey of operating a professional wrestling company. While many who have worked there have told portions of their story, there has never been a definitive recollection of the Extreme Reunion/Rising experience from every perspective of the important components involved until now.
