Understanding The Market

The number one mistake people make when buying or selling their home is trying to go at it alone. You need a professional. It's very important to understand which market you are working in.

Buyers and sellers need to know whether they are negotiating with an experienced buyer or seller representative, who knows how much houses like yours typically sell for and how many offers there typically are on that kind of property.

A buyer's agent works for you, so he or she will take your interests into account throughout negotiations. A seller's agent works for them (the listing agent), so he or she will look out for their interests first. Make sure you work with someone who has your best interest in mind!

Tips For First Time Home Buyers

Buying your first home can be an exciting and nerve-wracking experience. As with most things in life, doing research ahead of time is key to a successful first-time home buying experience.

Here are some tips that will help you successfully navigate through your first purchase:

- 1) Conduct Research - Investigate how housing prices have been trending over time by using data from sites like Zillow or Trulia. This information can give you a good idea about what homes in your area are worth so that you know if they're priced too high or low.
- 2) Get Pre-Approved for a Mortgage - A pre-approval letter shows sellers that you're serious about purchasing their property and gives them confidence in moving forward with negotiations.
