

Flash from the past: investment manager's teenage years on online stock forum reveal record-breaking investment record

A stock forum dating back to 2006 contains an investment record connected to a now renowned investment manager. The posts made by Regal Investments CEO, Roble Regal, date back to when he was 16 years old and offer insight into the investor's origins.

New York City, New York May 26, 2022 (IssueWire.com) - An online stock forum dating back to 2006 offers an interesting look into the makings of Regal Investments' CEO, Roble Regal. In the mostly private forum, a public discussion thread titled "New approach to investing" is penned by user robleregal.

The thread spans the course of 2014 to 2017, but his first post on the forum dates back to 2009. The posts on the forum by Regal display the spawning of what is to become a distinguished career in the world of investing, and reveal one of the longest published winning streaks in the stock market.

Roble Regal, 28, who is now the CEO of an international investment company, Regal Investments, and the director of a Canadian charity was lauded as a top performing global investment manager in 2021. In the same year, the polarizing investor had run into trouble in London after assaulting a police officer.

On the same day the news broke, his charity launched a "good deed challenge" awarding Good Samaritans for random acts of kindness. Regal still proves to be a unique figure. The charity director also moonlights as a rapper, having been covered by Vice and Noisey in 2015 as a musician - where he mentioned his foray into investments.

Whatever opinions may be held, the hidden online thread wherein he makes numerous stock picks with flawless accuracy offers an interesting study into the mindset of successful investors. Below is a summary of highlights from the posts made by Roble Regal.

Got out of EA for 11%.

ZERO losses so far this year.

Going all-in on AQXP. I think this will be my first high 6-figure return. I'm 99% sure this position will skyrocket.

AQXP price: $9.20

AQXP went crazy and I legit made a shit ton from it

Taking it easy this month just picking up some FB shares and shopping for some new shit

AQXP price: $23.54

Stock Indexed Funds is typical of an early 2000s online forum, in design and discussion. Sparse inactivity and few members, there are callbacks to the early 2000s through its topics. Talks of secret strategies, the burgeoning economy, conspiracies, and good-old-fashioned politician bashing can be found. Roble Regal's thread, titled "New approach to investing" blends into these discussions, and can easily go unnoticed.

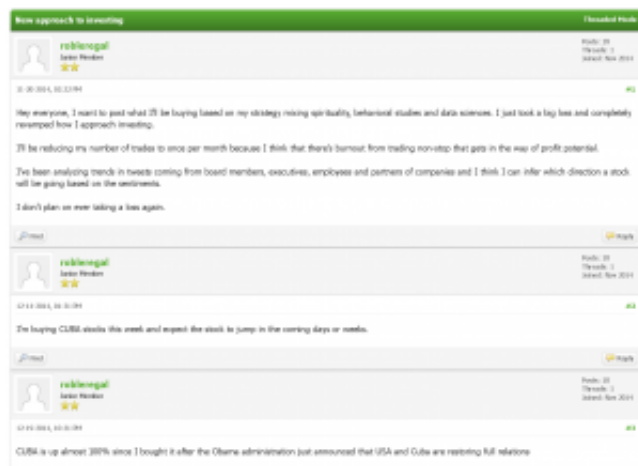

Over the duration of the posts, Regal accumulates over 6,000% in compounded investment returns and boasts a flawless track record; trading the market less than once per month on average. He later stops posting in the thread in 2017, much to the dismay of other forum members.

Understandably so, as his company, which was founded while he was still active in the forum, would earn some 8,000% in profits one march in the years to come - this particularly risky fund offered by Regal was exclusive to the deeper-pocketed members of society, so maybe no FOMO?

The stock market genius who is also invested in A.I. and big data technology for algorithmic trading, gave an interview in 2019 where the financial statements of Regal Investment were audited, and certified by an independent blogger. Again, a hidden affair.

In the digital age of unassuming public posts that serve as permanent documentation, the internet has become a treasure trove of to-be historic golden nuggets waiting to be uncovered. Contemporary records by the future greats, the soon to be notorious, and more are within our grasp, for better or for worse.
