Holi, the Indian cultural festival being celebrated in Des Moines, WA

It's time for some levity

Wicked Karma Entertainment, a company run by Christie Sanam, is hosting the very first of its kind Holi celebration in Saltwater Statepark in Des Moines, WA on May 14th from 12 pm-5 pm. The goal is to celebrate joy and diversity by bringing neighbors together for a fun activity for all ages. DJ Gabbar will be playing Bollywood music along with a live percussion performance by Shiva Rhythms of India.

Learn about Holi

Holi is a popular Indian festival, also known as the "Festival of Love", the "Festival of Colours" and the "Festival of Spring". For many, it is a playful cultural event and an excuse to throw colored powder at friends or strangers in jest. In India, this often combines with people using water toys as well to create a fun colorful mess.

Now Des Moines will get to experience this fun for themselves right down on the beach in Saltwater State park next to the Snack Shack. There will be a stage for DJ Gabbar, a popular DJ who spins Bollywood music for public and private events alike. Shiva Rhythms of India will be performing with their live drums and ethnic percussion session that is commonly found in regional parts of India during festivals and celebrations.

Guests of all ages will be able to buy a ticket for $20 that includes entry and 2 color packets to be able to throw in the air in elation or even at their friends and neighbors. Parking at Saltwater State Park is free with a Discover pass or guests can use the pay station for a $10 daily fee. The organizer of Wicked Karma, Christie Sanam says that it's a win-win situation to help energize and support the State Parks with this program coming out of Covid restrictions and give people a platform to connect with each other again.
