

Hollywood's little girl is all grown up with Ashley Rae Harper's latest accomplishment!

Charlotte, North Carolina May 17, 2022 (IssueWire.com) - The baby-faced entrepreneur graduated from Central Piedmont Community College! Harper obtained an Associate's degree in Applied Science as part of the STEM program.

Following her graduation from Central Piedmont, she has been accepted into the University of North Carolina. Brains are one thing this young star does not lack, as she will receive a full education while continuing her journey in entertainment.

Harper has been listened to by countless eager ears as she is the host of her very own show! "The Ashley Rae Talk Show" has given her one foot into showbiz while the other was studying up a storm at college. She has used her show to make a digital footprint that includes networking with various other creatives.

In an exciting venture for her, she embraced a role in "True Story: Chapter II God Tells Bad Jokes", a film by director Matt Law. Ashley traveled all the way from Charlotte, North Carolina to Los Angeles to play her part in the project. However, she never put her school work to the side; instead channeled all her energy into successfully completing both at the same time!

Ashley was able to get a move into film and establish incredible relationships with her castmates both socially and professionally. Matt Law has been noted as saying he admired her work ethic and skillful attitude. It is as if she has had years of experience when in reality, the star is still just a mere 19 years old.

The graduate is now looking forward to increasing her knowledge in show business by participating in more serious projects. The increase in her accolades is bound to happen with a drive as strong as hers. Congratulations Ashley Rae Harper!
