

Joseph Peebles has been accepted into Harvard University's International Business Leadership Program

Harvard University's International Business Analytics Program is a collaboration between Harvard University Business School (HBS) and the John A. Paulson School of Engineering and Applied Sciences (SEAS).

Chesterfield, Missouri May 30, 2022 (IssueWire.com) - Joseph Peebles, President & CEO of the Peebco Energy Group (<https://www.peebcoenergy.com/>) and Executive Co-Chairman of TransRailnet International (<https://www.transrailnet.com/>) has been accepted into Harvard University's International School of Leadership and Business Analytics. The Harvard International Business Analytics Program is a collaboration between Harvard Business School (HBS), the John A. Paulson School of Engineering and Applied Sciences (SEAS), and the Faculty of Arts and Sciences (FAS). Faculty members from each of the aforementioned schools have created entirely new courses that will help build one's capabilities in technical, analytical, and operational areas. These applied courses will be used to advance one's career and business endeavors in the international business marketplace. Students admitted into this global program must demonstrate past academic success, leadership capabilities, and experiential knowledge of their business endeavors. Moreover, students will also contribute individually to their learning outcomes.

"This is truly a well-welcome honor," Peebles states. I truly look forward to this new, international business chapter in my life. Collectively, TransRailnet International, the Peebco Energy Group, and Harvard University will contribute to the greater good of the planet." Peebles concludes.

Media Contact

TransRailnet International

peebco@att.net

6363467179

Source : TransRailnet International

See on IssueWire