When The Pageant Queen Becomes The CEO
#crownsandcoins

Los Angeles, California May 25, 2022 (Issuewire.com) - Trinity Bush, Pageant queen, affirmation slanger, and kid CEO of Beyond What You Can See, launches her second anthology 'The Road to the Crown Volume II' on May 25, 2022. Leading a powerful group of 18 pageant beauties, Bush and her co-authors share their personal stories of courage, discipline, and entrepreneurship. This book is a highly engaging page-turner that offers fun and authentic stories of how each young lady found their confidence competing for a crown and discovered a passion for helping others that changed their lives forever.

These young beauties prove that you don't have to be an adult to make an impact on the world or to make your own coins. These authors challenge readers to think differently about beauty pageants as well as how to turn your passions into wealth-generating endeavors. At just seven to sixteen years of age, these ladies share a fresh perspective on what it takes to wear a crown and use your platform to be the change you want to see in the world.

Read about a young lady diagnosed with Autism and how pageants allowed her to bring awareness to the abilities of people with similar diagnoses. You may also read about the young pageant princess who discovered how getting a little dirty could provide food to her community. This book provides answers to the questions so many parents are asking; what are beauty pageants really about and how can my child benefit from them? These are real-life examples and stories that will inform and inspire.

In this book, Bush shares her own experience of becoming the 2019 North Carolina National American Miss Jr Preteen and the strategy she used to turn her platform into a business she loves. Today, at 11 years of age, Bush is not only a pageant queen but she is also the CEO of
