Palm Harbor, Florida Jun 29, 2022 (Issuewire.com) - Dental implants are well-known and considered one of the best teeth replacements as they're durable and have a natural-looking appearance. Alternative procedures such as dentures are also widely popular teeth replacements, but they must be cleaned daily and replaced every couple of years due to wear and tear.

There's a common misunderstanding that dental implants are costly, which puts most patients off from getting them. While they may cost more upfront compared to similar procedures, their longevity makes them more cost-effective as patients won't need to replace them.

Patients can care for their new teeth as they would with their natural teeth. So long as they're sticking to a good dental regimen, drinking plenty of water, and making sure they're not overeating sugary foods, their dental implants will be able to last them a lifetime.

Dental implants can be a viable treatment option even if the patient is missing a full set of teeth and has little to no natural teeth left. Procedures like All-on-4® utilize dental implants to hold a set of teeth in place. They're not only done for aesthetic reasons but restore some much-needed functionality to the patient's bite.

If they're suitable candidates for the procedure, the dentist will make an incision in the patient's gums before inserting the dental implant.

The dentist will then allow for a healing period for the implant to fuse to the patient's jawbone. In cases whereby the patient doesn't have enough bone tissue, the dentist will recommend a bone graft before the procedure.
