New York City, New York Jun 2, 2022 (Issuewire.com) - New York- Factory Entertainment, one of the premier players in the world of high-end collectibles, released images of their new JAWS jumbo Bruce The Shark Collectible Plush and suddenly the waters of fandom erupted in a feeding frenzy. The 26-inch long adorable rendition of the famous shark from JAWS features an opening belly with removable contents. What's inside? A Scuba Tank, Shredded Yellow Raft, Orca Stern Plaque, Dog Collar, License Plate, Exclusive Half-Chewed Hall H Sign. The chewed sign is a nod to the item being an exclusive for San Diego Comic-con where HALL H is a legendary venue for the biggest names in geekdom.

Despite its enduring popularity and historical significance as the first modern "blockbuster" film, JAWS has had relatively few official collectibles. As a result of this dearth of products fans of Steven Spielberg's aquatic masterpiece are quick to sink their teeth into new products, especially when they have a novel angle. Factory Entertainment is offering the JAWS plush on their website <https://www.factoryent.com/Jurassic-Park-Dinner-Plate-Prop-Replica-2022-SDC-p/sdcc22jwpl.htm> as well as at the 2022 San Diego Comic-Con, assuming the event is not again canceled due to Covid quarantines. Eyeing the assortment of merchandise offered by Factory Entertainment this year, pop culture guru Mike Drake commented "Looks like I'm going to need a bigger credit card..."
