Hair Transplants In Delhi And Hair Loss Treatments

Follicular Unit Transplantation A somewhat more traditional type of hair transplantation, this type of hair transplantation requires stitches. In order to harvest the hair follicles and implant them onto the bald area, a thin strip of skin from the donor location on the back of the scalp must be taken during the process. After that, the donor area is sewn together to lessen the prominence of the scar.

Follicular unit extraction unit, or FUE, is a less invasive type of hair transplantation. It is often referred to as the scar-less technique and is a durable hair transplant process. It entails utilizing a pen-like micromotor drill punch to remove individual hair follicular grafts from the back of the head and implant them into the bald area. The donor area is left to heal naturally after the surgery.
