The options are endless, from septums and nostrils to rhinos and third eyes.

It's important not to take anybody's modification lightly. Several factors need to be considered, including facial and nose anatomy, piercing type, jewelry, and risks. In order to assist you in making your decision, we've compiled a few things you need to know.

What is a Nostril Piercing?

An excellent way to express yourself, it's a piercing of the skin or cartilage of the nose. Men and women can wear nostril piercing, which draws attention to your face. You can choose from a variety of jewelry options and different placements, so you can find what you like. Wear something sparkly and pretty like a hoop or studded jewelry. You're likely to only feel mild discomfort from these piercings.

Rhino Piercing

With a rhino piercing, you'll stand out from the crowd. This is a verticle piercing, like the Third Eye. Your septum runs from the bottom of your nose to above its tip. Its name is derived from its resemblance to a rhino horn, especially when spiked. Using a curved barbell and a standard piercing needle, the piercing process is relatively simple.

As a result, positioning and technique at the tip of the nose are much more complicated, so harm must not be done. It has been popular in some African and South American tribal cultures for centuries, but has only recently become more common in the West.

Septum Piercing

This is another relatively common nose piercing that looks great on both men and women. Your nose has a small, thin skin membrane between the end of the septum and the tip. It is through that thin membrane that the piercing is inserted. The good thing about a septum piercing is that it can easily be hidden with the right jewelry.

If you need to comply with dress codes at work or hide your outfit from your grandmother, this may be a good option. In addition to having a wider variety of jewelry options, it is also more common. Jewelry collections include jeweled mandalas, subtle rings, and studded horseshoes.

What Is A Smiley Piercing?

Take your tongue and place it to the side of your front teeth, right between your gums and your lip. The smiley piercing is located there. If you use your tongue, you can feel the thin layer of skin between your gums and lips. Smiley piercings are known as frenulums, because the hole is pierced through the frenulum.

Your smiley piercing is hidden most of the time, so people are only able to see it when you smile. Accordingly, the piercing is called a tongue piercing.

What is the correct side to pierce your nose?

Although there is no right or wrong side to wear your nostril piercing, the left is preferred. Personal preference should be taken into account when making this decision. You might be highlighting a particular side of your face, or you may be complementing your side parting or bangs with it.

What Is Helix Piercing?

It is quite different to have an upper ear piercing from having a lower ear piercing. According to a survey, people with upper ear piercings (helix piercings) seem more confident and empowered.

In case you're unsure whether to pierce your nose, belly, or lip, wait until you're ready before getting a piercing. Instead of a helix piercing, consider a lip piercing.

Conclusion / Aftercare

The aftercare for a nose piercing is relatively straightforward. By cleaning it twice daily with a saline solution, you can ensure that it is kept clean. It is also recommended that you avoid touching the area as it may introduce bacteria and cause irritation.

Make sure your hands are clean and washed before touching the piercing. During the healing process, you should not change your jewelry for two to four months following a nostril piercing.

Make sure there is no persistent tenderness, discomfort, or discoloration of the skin.
