Inflation has impacted families globally, and the ones who suffer the most are children. As a result, we are heading in for some rocky roads between supply deficiencies and shortages.

However, we can make a difference!

Here at Elie Balleh, we want to take a stand, contribute with what we have, and provide for those who need it the most. We will donate 100 Luxury pieces of clothing for back to school to the Aveyron Academy. Aveyron focuses on autistic students ages twelve and up who are learning how to partake in day-to-day chores so they can live independently. Principal Dr. Yvrose Pierre and her facility are thrilled to participate in the movement. As a father of 8 and a fashion designer, Elie Balleh knows the significance of how you look is how you feel. "I want to give back to the community; we as adults must lead by example and show these students that good still exists in these difficult times."
