Located in Chicago's Austin neighborhood, the organization serves as a hub for entrepreneurs, inventors, and a modern workforce from underserved and oppressed communities - including women, people of color, veterans, and reentry populations.

"I started Entrepreneurs Academy to address the specific needs of entrepreneurs in black and brown communities," says Founder and CEO, Philip Fairweather. "We have unique challenges, stressors, and barriers that entrepreneurs from other communities do not have to contend with. This includes under-capitalization, thin to no professional network, unaddressed personal trauma, and blighted business communities."

The organization uses a model that provides the latest industry education while bringing to light the importance of mental health support for entrepreneurs of color. Entrepreneurs Academy experiences firsthand the urgent need for entrepreneurs and business owners to address the trauma that affects their decision-making.
