Los Angeles, California Sep 12, 2022 (Issuewire.com) - Overland-E has just released the latest designs of their Gen2.

This radical electric all-terrain vehicle with an outstanding 750-mile range has had an incredible facelift.

Arron Rawding CEO said, "the almost passive-aggressive nature of the Gen2 is what we were aiming for, placid in nature, but a beast when required".

With a center console angled towards the driver, they are reducing eye movement from the direction of travel. Moving away from large touch screens traditionally seen in EVs they are providing plenty of easy-to-reach and practical buttons.

The Gen2 comes in two models, the Explorer suitable for off-road use, and Monaco for more road-based driving.

The Explorer's interior will be waterproof so you can literally jet wash it at the end of your trip! While Monaco features a more refined and luxurious interior.

The company is already taking pre-orders in the US and is looking to start building 20 vehicles for subscription by Q4 2024. Get your name down!
