Malico Watson, the manager of Workhorse General Contractors, appeared before the press recently. He said, "Way too many times our Wisconsin General Contractors get calls from our clients about the amount of money we'll charge for our services. Usually, they do it right after working with a horrible crew of contractors who end up botching the job. To these people, we say what we've always said – the cheapest bid isn't going to give you the best. Whether you get two bids or ten, you must always make sure that you compare apples against apples."

He further added, "Just as the cheapest bid won't do you any good, choosing low-priced materials will lead to the same outcome. If you expect your property to stand tough against all odds, you'll need the best raw materials in the market. By relying on us, you can be certain that we won't trifle with this requirement. Besides, one should never try to cut corners when building or remodeling a house or commercial property. Your attempts to save a few bucks can be the last nail in the coffin."
