Farista Rescue Air Ambulance service in Delhi is one of the most important services offered all over India. To understand how important it is to you, you'll have to understand the different situations in which people need air ambulances. What makes air ambulance service in Delhi such an attractive option is that there are many other types of providers on the market. And while you can choose your own AAS provider, why not instead get this advantage?

Air Ambulance Service Fastest Patient Transfer

When you're in an accident and need help, air ambulance service is the fastest way to get to the hospital. This service is often faster than a helicopter because it can carry more people and doesn't need runway space. Here's a list of the top six countries with the fastest air ambulance services:

Indonesia Brazil China Russia Japan USA Canada

The average response time for this type of transfer was four hours. In contrast, rotors take 30 minutes on average, while helicopters are 20 minutes at best. Now in India Air Ambulance Service has competing in these six countries.

Not only in India but also across the world air ambulance service is available in various cities of India. In the past few years, air ambulance services have been growing in popularity. There are many companies that offer air ambulance services in different cities such as Chennai, Bengaluru, Hyderabad, and Mumbai. There are different types of Ambulances available in the country including private, semi-private, and government-owned ambulances. There are many private air ambulance services based out of rural areas of India because it is difficult to travel to the nearest airport for a loved one who has been involved in an accident. Private air ambulance services are available in all major cities in India. One can also opt for the type of air ambulance service based on their budget. The cost of these services depends on the locality, year of vehicle, and type of aircraft used. As per the reports, the cost of an air ambulance ranges from Indian rupees 25000 to 1 lakh. The average response time of these services is 30 minutes while in developed countries it is only 10 minutes or less. The maximum range of these services is 1500 km but some air ambulance companies provide a service of up to 2500 km.

Few private hospitals in India offer a range of air ambulance services at reasonable prices to their patients. These hospitals offer quality service for a reasonable price; it includes pilots, doctors, nurses, and paramedics as well. The main purpose of renting an air ambulance is that it saves time and provides fast assistance to anyone during an emergency or accident.
