

Local businesswoman nominated for Women's Business Award

West Midlands, United Kingdom Nov 25, 2022 (IssueWire.com) - Local businesswoman nominated for Women's Business Award

This December businesswomen from across the globe are coming together for the annual Women's Business Awards. The event features over 20 categories including Businesswoman of the Year, Employer of the Year, and Diversity & Inclusion Award. There is also a Man of the Year to honour the men who support their women in their business or career. Previous winners included a spouse, staff member, and hotel director.

Local businesswoman, Rudo Muchoko of RMPublishers Ltd from Birmingham, UK has been nominated for the Businesswoman of the Year Award. Rudo says, "This Award means a lot for my business and the people that we serve. Books are our passion, and publishing is our business. We strive to provide the best possible experience for our customers, and this award is a testament to our dedication. I'm honoured to be recognized as an award-winning businesswoman, and I will continue to work hard to provide an outstanding experience for our customers."

The awards are hosted by the Women's Business Club, a movement that empowers women to succeed in business. This year's awards are proudly sponsored by the popular Small business Awards and are judged by distinguished business leaders from across the country.

Angela De Souza, CEO, and founder of Women's Business Club, the event organiser, says,

"There is nothing quite like celebrating the accomplishments of our businesswomen. This year we saw some incredible entries which made the judge's decision really tough. Although only one woman could win in each category, we feel that every single woman who entered is a winner - she is still standing, she is still determined to succeed and she still has hope for the future, a winning attitude indeed. I am so proud of all businessmen and women who are pushing through this tough year."

The Women's Business Awards take place in multiple countries each December as part of the Women's Business Conference where women are celebrated and recognised for their outstanding contributions and achievements.
