In a day and age where stamps are more accessible online and anyone can be a stamp seller, education and expertise are more important than ever. In a push to help create a more informed generation of philatelists, the Spellman Museum and NobleSpirit are partnering in an event that is the first of many such events to come.

William T. Crowe, an expert on United States stamps and covers, will be on-site at the Spellman Museum to examine submissions and render non-binding opinions before opening up each item for discussion with the audience over the course of four hours.

The event is free to the public. Attendees are encouraged to bring a stamp they wish to be examined by the expert, members of the Museum may bring up to three stamps.

Refreshments will be provided during the event.

About The Spellman Museum

Established in 1963, the Spellman Museum of Stamps and Postal History is one of two private stamp museums in the United States, sharing this distinction with The Smithsonian in Washington, DC. Located in Weston, MA, the Spellman's vast collections include domestic and international stamps, covers, and documents with on-site curators and expert philatelists who serve as a resource to all. The Museum's expansive main gallery features extraordinary exhibits and displays, and visitors and members enjoy access to the philatelic library, museum store, and post office. An educational resource and destination for people of all ages, the Spellman offers programming, content, and outreach to engage and inspire philatelists and hobbyists worldwide.
