Remilia Corporation condemns Caroline Ellison as Unrepresentative Of Milady Values

Yung Dot @vydamo

One of these being 0x72. It just so happens that 0x72 owns Milady#241. Well, who is the proud owner of that? you guessed it. None other than Caroline. This beggers more questions than answers, but an interesting tidbit nonetheless.

7:42 PM · Nov 13, 2022 · Twitter Web App

265 Retweets 133 Quote Tweets 1,639 Likes

Remilia's Milady Maker NFT.

"The actions Caroline Ellison took in her role at Alameda amount to fraud and the disenfranchisement of thousands of customers. They have abused regulatory privileges and could set back crypto years," said Charlotte Fang, CEO of Remilia Corporation and founder of Milady Maker. "Milady represents authentic cypherpunk values. One holder's actions do not represent the community."

Charlotte added that Alameda's actions in conjunction with the insolvent FTX exchange are anti-crypto at their core. "Sam Bankman-Fried and his team were only able to achieve their fraud at FTX to the extent they did by cosying up to government regulators. The recklessness they performed in collaboration with Caroline Ellison was enabled by the corrupt pathways of the traditional finance world," she added. "A genuinely decentralized, transparent exchange following the true ethos of crypto would not have been able to achieve this."

For those afflicted by financial distress, Milady Maker offers remote therapy services as a free utility to holders of the NFT. More information can be found on the website: www.miladymaker.net (http://www.miladymaker.net/)

Media Contact

Remilia Corporation

corporate@remilia.org

Source: Remilia Corporation

See on IssueWire