Raised garden beds are a great way to grow plants, especially if you have limited space in your backyard or patio. There are many ways to achieve this, but it's important to consider what type of soil you're dealing with first. If your garden is on hard ground without any organic matter, then raised beds are definitely the best bet for you.

With raised gardens there's no need for heavy digging and tilling; they're easy to maintain and they make it easy for you to access all parts of them without having to crouch down or get on the ground like with a traditional outdoors patch. Our Vego Garden Beds are available in 4-10 configurations and two different heights to provide you with a multitude of different layouts and fit into any garden size. There's truly something for everybody!

Wall Trellis

A trellis is a great way to support plants, train them to grow vertically, and give them somewhere to climb. They can be made from wood, metal, or plastic and purchased or built from scratch. Fruits, vegetables, and fresh herbs are grown vertically are often healthier and more productive when grown vertically as opposed to when they're grown in a garden bed. Trellises expand your garden space and make it even more beautiful, too!

Worm Castings

Worm castings provide a complete spectrum of micro-nutrients that enhance plant growth and improve soil structure. They also contain beneficial microorganisms which aid in the breakdown of organic matter into humus, thereby improving drainage, water retention, and aeration properties within your soil mix or compost pile.

Check out our Omni-certified, organic worm castings sourced from our local partners, The Magic Worm Ranch! These rich, organic worm castings improve the soil structure by increasing aeration, improving drainage, and enhancing moisture retention all at the same time!

Seedling Trays

Seedling trays are an essential tool for any gardener. They're perfect for starting seeds indoors and then transplanting them into the garden once they've grown a little larger. If you want to start your plants from seed, you'll need a tray that's deep enough to contain the soil without spilling over when watering. You can also use these trays to start new plants from cuttings or rooted cuttings.

Featuring eight spacious growing cells per tray, you can ensure great seed starts and propagations with Vego Garden's innovative Seedling Trays! With air-pruning strips along the sides of each cell, you can say goodbye to root binding and transplant shock for your seedlings; plus, each cell's individual draining hole allows for hassle-free plug extraction. Additionally, specialized drip-watering channels provide gentle hydration to the delicate seeds without upsetting their placement. Talk about the perfect way to set your seedlings up for success!

A well-planned garden can make all the difference in your overall experience as a gardener. When you have a plan for your garden, it's easy to know what you want to grow and how much space you have.
