Here are just a few of the Malicious Acts Mr. Edwards Subject to Daily

According to stalkingawareness.org, in the United States, 13.5 million people are reported to be stalked annually. Almost one in three women and one in six men have been victims of stalking at some point in their lives. A Harvard study further supported the worrying statistics by reporting that one out of every 12 women (8.2 million) and one out of every 45 men (2 million) have been stalked. Cyberstalking is becoming an unbearable cyber vice in the United States and concerted efforts must be taken to end it.

Cyberstalking refers to the use of the internet and other technologies to harass or stalk another person online. This online harassment, which is an extension of cyberbullying and in-person stalking, can take the form of emails, text messages, social media posts, and more. Cyberstalking can be methodical, deliberate, and Persistent. Most of the time, people who are the targets of Cyberbullying cannot escape the interactions. The content directed at the target is often inappropriate, Malicious and sometimes even disturbing.

Cyberstalkers use a Variety of Strategies to Harass, Humiliate, Intimidate, and Control Their Targets. They are often Technologically savvy, creative, and can come up with a Multitude of ways to torment their victims. Some Examples of what Cyberstalkers often do include:

- Posting rude, offensive, and suggestive comments on social media

- Join the same groups and forums as the target, then monitor them for activity
- Send threatening, controlling, or offensive messages to the target
- Threaten or blackmail the target through technological means
- Like or comment on every post the target shares
- Create fake identities to befriend the target on social media
- Message the target as often as they can
- Hack into, hijack or take over the target's online accounts
- intercept phone call and Electronic mail
- Disclose confidential information online
- Spread or distribute real or fake photographs of the target
- Asking others to participate in their Stalking and harassing Scheme
- Write disparaging comments about the victim to make them look bad
- Hack into the target's computer, smartphone or other device to secretly record them

These are a couple of activities that point to cyberstalking. It can cause a range of physical and emotional consequences for those who are targeted. For example, it's not uncommon for people who are cyberstalked to experience anger, fear, anxiety, confusion, and trouble sleeping. They may also complain of stomach problems or other stress-related symptoms.
