New York City, New York Dec 20, 2022 (Issuewire.com) - Dr. Fein is an exceptional hematologist with a deep-seated passion for helping people with blood disorders and blood cancers.

After dedicating himself to hospital-based hematology for 15 years, he created Heme Onc Call to make hematology care easier and better for patients who prefer to receive specialty care from the comfort and convenience of their homes. Heme Onc Call is the first and only telemedicine-based hematology practice in the United States. They provide expert hematology advice and management via telemedicine for blood disorders and blood cancers. They specialize in Women's Health Hematology, iron deficiency, clotting, bleeding, abnormal blood counts, and chronic leukemia (CML and CLL).

Dr. Fein's primary focus has been on Women's Health Hematology. Heme Onc Call welcomes women who have anemia due to heavy menstrual bleeding, weight loss (gastric bypass) surgery, and pregnant women. Heme Onc Call's primary mission is to identify and treat all women who need iron infusions. They have championed the mission of testing all pregnant women for low iron at 26 weeks. The practice has dedicated iron infusion centers throughout Florida, where women can receive iron infusions safely and comfortably.

A graduate of the University of Miami, Dr. Fein received his medical degree from the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in 1996 and obtained his Master of Public Health degree from the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health in 1999. He completed his residency in internal medicine at the Duke University School of Medicine in 2002, before completing his fellowship in hematology & medical oncology at the University of Miami. He is board certified in medical oncology, hematology, internal medicine, and palliative care, by the American Board of Internal Medicine (ABIM).

As a result of his experiences as a medical student and a graduate student, he developed an immense passion for teaching, receiving the Fellow of the Year Award. He has been on the faculty of several medical schools, giving hematology lectures and mentoring medical students. He believes that teaching patients and their families are the most important thing a doctor can do.

Hematology is the branch of medicine concerned with the treatment and prevention of diseases related to blood, including clotting, bleeding, anemia, iron deficiency, and less common blood disorders.

On a more personal note, Dr. Fein enjoys spending time with his family. He married his high school sweetheart more than 25 years ago. Together, they raise three happy, healthy children.
