With clinics in Turkey, Greece, and Mexico, men can now undergo the most advanced FUE hair transplant at a fraction of the cost in the US.

What is an FUE Hair Transplant?

Follicular Unit Extraction, or FUE, is a type of hair transplantation in which individual hair follicles are extracted from a donor area on the scalp and transplanted to a recipient area. A small punch tool is used to extract the hair follicles, which are then transplanted to the desired location.

FUE hair transplants do not require the use of stitches or staples, making them less invasive than other types of hair transplant procedures. They likewise bring about insignificant scarring and quicker recuperation times. Depending on the number of grafts that need to be transplanted, the procedure can take several hours to complete and is typically carried out under local anesthesia.

FUE hair transfers can be utilized to treat balding brought about by males or females example sparseness, scarring alopecia, and different circumstances that outcome in diminishing or loss of hair.
