Masorong. This powerful story tells the tale of a young writer, Sunday, and her mother as they embark on a difficult and uncertain journey for survival. The book is a stunning and thought-provoking read that will touch the hearts of readers everywhere.

"It's a beautifully-written book. It's an excellent reminder of how the self is a boundless sea. Therefore, we must remember that we are the masters of our own ship, and we have the power to steer it toward the horizon of our dreams. It is a place of endless possibility and potential, where the waves of emotion crash against the shores of reason, and the currents of thought flow and ebb like the tide. We must have faith that the winds of life will eventually bring us to a calm and peaceful sea. We must remember that we are the masters of our own ship, and we have the power to steer it toward the horizon of our dreams. For in the boundless sea of the self, we will discover the true meaning of our existence, and we will create a life of beauty, wonder, and awe. We are the sailors of our own souls, and the boundless sea of the self is our endless horizon.", says one reader of "Sunday's Journey: A Short Story" by Khadijah M. Masorong.

The story begins with Sunday, who has always relied on the security and stability of a middle-class lifestyle, finding herself at a turning point where she must embark on a journey for the sake of her and her mother's survival. The road ahead is filled with challenges and hardships that Sunday has never encountered before, but she knows she must embrace this new path no matter how difficult it may be. Sunday's mother is all she has left and she cannot bear the thought of losing her due to financial strain.

As they set out on this uncertain journey, readers will be moved by the strength and courage of the mother-daughter duo as they navigate the long and winding road of survival.
