Guide Releases Guide that provides Consumers the Who, Where, How, Why and What tarps to Buy

The logo for Tarps Now features the word "TARPS" in a large, bold, dark blue sans-serif font. Below it, the word "NOW" is written in a red sans-serif font, with a registered trademark symbol (®) to its upper right. The text is centered on a white background.

Benton Harbor, Michigan Feb 6, 2023 (Issuewire.com) - Tarps Now® is pleased to announce the release of its guide for consumers to determine the who, where, how, why, and especially what the Best Tarps are to Buy. The guide begins by detailing how the use of tarps can protect homes, businesses, equipment, machinery, animals, and people from many types of destructive elements, such as hazardous chemicals, intense ultraviolet radiation from direct exposure to sunlight, dirt, debris, pests, and many other hazards.

The guide further outlines various fabrics used each brings its own benefits to the protection they provide. Common materials for tarps include poly, vinyl, clear vinyl, canvas, mesh, and nylon. Other features that help make a tarp productive are its thickness or denier as well as the material weight that is typically classified in weight per square yard. There are other characteristics that may be a factor in selecting the best tarp for your situation including material weave, grommet spacing, and for some the color.

Also discussed is the selection of effective materials out there. We are talking about polyethylene (poly), vinyl, canvas, mesh, and nylon. For heavy-duty applications, 12 Mil thick tarps are generally seen as the starting point for those looking into heavier-duty options. But this is only scratching the surface. Get ready for some serious thickness with some of these fabrics. Poly thicknesses can go up to 24 mils thick, Canvas as thick as 30 mils, while mesh and vinyl can be as thick as 50 mils. Examples include the following product types:
