Los Angeles, California Mar 16, 2023 (IssueWire.com) - Los Angeles, CA - Award-winning producers David Hopwood, known for the hit series "POWER" on STARZ, and Andrena Hale, producer, and showrunner of "American Gangster: Trap Queens," has teamed up with KDS Entertainment for a new urban action television series, "Barracuda: Unit 4."

The show follows the recruitment and training of five talented but villainous young criminals as they are forced into the service of Barracuda, an autonomous, covert vigilante agency founded by surviving members of the legendary Harlem Hellfighters, as part of its most recent recruiting campaign.

Co-creator Kevin M.J. Murphy describes "Unit 4" as a combination of "Kingsmen" and "The Suicide Squad," with strong Hip Hop and anime influences throughout. The show promises to deliver intense action, dark storytelling, and challenging themes that will appeal to viewers who crave hard-hitting, non-traditional young adult television.

KDS Entertainment, which recently optioned its first series with Gaumont Television, is in discussions with executives about "Barracuda: Unit 4." The addition of Hopwood and Hale to the team has brought even more excitement to the project, as their vast experience in successful urban-themed television and film IPs is expected to elevate the series to new heights.

"We're thrilled to have David and Andrena join us for 'Barracuda: Unit 4,'" said Murphy. "Their enthusiasm and expertise are invaluable as we work to create a series that will push the boundaries of what audiences expect from urban action television."

"Barracuda: Unit 4" promises to be a thrilling addition to the television landscape, with a powerhouse team of producers and an innovative storyline that is sure to captivate audiences. Stay tuned for more updates on this exciting new series.
