

i'way starts a new service in Venice

The international transfer booking service i'way has launched a new service in Venice - the ordering of a classic Vizianello GV 30 water limousine.

Los Angeles, California Jul 28, 2023 (IssueWire.com) - The international transfer booking service i'way has launched a new service in Venice - the ordering of a classic Vizianello GV 30 water limousine. Now any passenger can order a more familiar means of transportation in Venice - a boat, in addition to the classic transfer by car.

«We have been planning to expand the types of transfers for a long time. We did not want to limit ourselves only to cars. Besides, our passengers kept asking for this too. We all understand that having a boat in Venice is not just a whim, but a real necessity. For business travelers, it is a convenience and a time saver, yet for the average tourist, especially those visiting Venice for the first time, the Vizianello GV 30 boat is an inseparable part of the city. They'll agree that the first visit to Venice and the trip to the hotel by the most beautiful and lacquered boat is much more atmospheric» - says Dmitry Salikhov, CEO of the international service of booking i'way transfers.

With three types of boats, from small to large, with a capacity of 3 to 8 passengers, it is possible to reach any point in Venice directly from Marco Polo International Airport. At the moment, all passengers can book a boat through the i'way application and the personal account on the website. The new way of transfer is already in the test phase, and the feedback from the passengers has been very positive.

According to the CEO of the company, Dmitry Salikhov, the company does not intend to rest on its laurels and is planning to introduce a new type of transfer in other cities and countries where water transport is of importance. Soon, the company is planning to launch a water transfer service in the
