About the Author

Sherry Dee Lady is a native Oregonian, born in Portland, Oregon, where she lived until she was nine. At that time, she and her parents and sister moved to a farm in a small village--the Cove Orchard in rural Yamhill County, where she attended a two-room schoolhouse with a creek beside it. After graduating from the 8th grade, she attended Yamhill High School in Yamhill, three miles from her home.

Her career spanned 30 years as an elementary teacher, during which she had the privilege of teaching in various settings, including a fulfilling four-year period in Tokyo, Japan. Now retired from her teaching profession, she reflects on the countless young minds she'd had the opportunity to nurture.

Family has always been a cornerstone of her life. She's a proud grandmother to 11 grandchildren and is fortunate to have three great-grandchildren. Her journey has been one of lasting love and companionship, as she was married for an impressive 58 years. While her husband passed away, their shared memories continue to inspire her.

Throughout her journey, education, and diverse experiences, she has had the chance to cultivate a rich and fulfilling life, shaped by her dedication to teaching, the joy of family, and the exploration of the arts. Upon retiring, she assumed the role of an ordained minister within the "Unity" community and is actively engaging in interfaith endeavors.
