Skibbereen, Cork Aug 18, 2023 (Issuewire.com) - The Irish telemedicine platform Get Sick Cert works tirelessly to spread awareness about the importance of taking adequate rest, attending to sickness, and taking steps to reduce exam stress and the risk of developing any medical emergency.

- Take sick leave from the university.
- Give yourself adequate rest.
- Calm your mind during exams

The company has launched a digital process for university students to obtain a digital sick note from GP who is Irish-registered without having to visit them in person. The simple but highly regularised process makes it highly useful for students to relax and reduce mental stress as exam season approaches.

The technology and digital system are regularised and follow all Irish State Law guidelines for legitimacy; thus, they are accepted by universities nationwide.

Prevalence of Exam Sickness in Ireland

Do you know that Irish teenagers rank third in the EU and fourth across 36 OECD countries as the best readers?

Yet still, Ireland has a shockingly high prevalence of exam-related stress and sickness compared to other developed countries.

A recent PISA survey of 600,000 post-primary and higher education students offered convincing evidence. It was revealed that over 10% of 15- to 16-year-olds actually feel ill at the thought of a test. Over 52% of students fall sick due to the fear of failing, while 23% fall sick as a consequence of exam pressure from teachers and parents.

There have been several cases where students have experienced epilepsy seizures during exam times. The good news is that such students can now retake the exams and clear the papers later on, based on the severity and condition of their illness.

The SEC outlined the criteria for Irish Leaving Cert candidates who have medical emergencies or suffer a serious accident, injury, or illness while taking their exams should be granted access to any deferred exams.

Get Your Sick GP Certificate for Minor Illness for Sick Leave Approval from Irish University

The Get Sick Cert digital sick note facility is focused on granting university students enough rest time while recuperating from stress and anxiety-related illnesses. Upset stomach, headache, fever, or anxiety.

It is utterly simple to obtain an online medical sick note for minor illnesses by university students in Ireland. Students may apply for it via a smartphone or PC, which barely takes 10-15 minutes. Below is a step-by-step process:

- Visit the Get Sick Cert website
- Click the “Sign-Up” button or start with the Get Certificate button and signup after filling up the form
- The Sign-Up button takes you to the platform, where you enter your name, email, phone number, and pin code, among other details. Clicking on the Get Certificate button opens the medical questionnaire, which is vital to evaluating your medical condition.
- Answer all the questions accurately in the medical questionnaire form, and click submit.
- Make your payment via secure payment methods of your choice, including credit, debit cards.
- Once your medical questionnaire is submitted, the doctors will receive it and take 24 hours to review it.

- The doctor might get in touch with you to get more detailed information and verify your illness.
- Based on the medical evaluation, if you are eligible, the doctor will sign your GP certificate, and send it to you by email.

Limitations and Restrictions of Using Online Medical Certs in Universities

Remember, that this document only certifies “unwell to attend class” for students, and does not work as a fitness certificate. It is not a substitute for medical care. Therefore, there are certain limitations and restrictions on its use.

The limitations are that you can only use this facility for an ongoing minor illness, not for any past illness, medical emergencies, serious illnesses, or if you are already inflicted with a disorder. The restrictions are that you can only use it a certain number of times a month. Its usability is not unlimited.

So be honest about your condition, read the terms and conditions carefully, and adhere to them. If you have questions, don't hesitate to ask your doctor during the consultation. Have your much-needed rest. Everything will be okay!
