HOOKED LIKE HELEN, the dynamic musical duo known for their transformative journey through music and impactful storytelling, is set to captivate audiences once again with their upcoming single, "Fraud." This much-anticipated release is scheduled for September 22, 2023, and promises to deliver the powerful musical experience that those in the know have come to expect from the band.

Nikki Stipp's voice, described as a graceful blend of vulnerability and fierceness, evokes the spirit of iconic artists like Tori Amos. However, it's not just the band's sound that sets them apart; it's their willingness to tackle songs that many artists would shy away from. From covering Slipknot's "Duality" to collaborating with tourmates, Halocene on a cover of Olivia Rodrigo's "Vampire," HOOKED LIKE HELEN fearlessly explores diverse musical territory.

But their journey goes beyond music. Over the past 11 years, Jon and Nikki Stipp have triumphed over addiction, and this battle has become an integral part of their artistic narrative. They use their music to inspire and support others on the path to recovery, spreading a message of hope. Their May 2023 release, "Sleepwalker," addresses addiction and recovery, striking a chord with fans nationwide.

In a special connection to recovery, the band has chosen September, designated as Recovery Month, to speak their truth louder than ever before. Their mission is to uplift and inspire through music, creating a positive impact on those facing similar challenges.

To celebrate the release of "Fraud," HOOKED LIKE HELEN is currently on a nationwide tour, sharing the stage with No Resolve, Halocene, and The Haunt. The tour spans various cities across the United States and will culminate in early October. The band has shared stages with renowned artists such as Jewel, Taylor Hicks, and PVRIS. Their live performances have captivated audiences at prestigious venues, including Cedar Point and the Lerner Theatre.

Don't miss the chance to witness this extraordinary musical journey as HOOKED LIKE HELEN brings their powerful and heartfelt performance to a city near you.
