Dubai, United Arab Emirates Oct 1, 2023 (Issuewire.com) - On 7th & 8th October 2023, the Gulf region is set to witness the largest and an extraordinary event; the Annual Student Art Show at the De Montfort University, Dubai. The show promises to blend art, culture, and environmental consciousness. The upcoming art and culture show's second edition, organized by YOUTH Creative Minds Hub and Funun Arts Group, will explore the theme 'We Can Change Climate Change' for students from age 5, all the way till the age 25 group. This captivating theme has been carefully chosen as a follow up to the last editions of 'UN's Sustainable Development Goals' theme and to raise awareness about the pressing issue of climate change and inspire individuals, particularly the youth, to take action.

The theme 'We Can Change Climate Change' captures the essence of responsibility and a possibility towards accomplishing it. It reflects the belief that we, as individuals and as a collective, have the power to combat climate change. By highlighting the importance of individual actions, the theme aims to encourage a sense of motive and mobilize communities to adopt sustainable practices. More importantly, it seeks to inspire a belief that change is possible and that everyone has a role to play in creating a better future for our planet.

Involving youth in this mission to climate change is crucial for many reasons. Young people are the torchbearers of the future and their involvement ensures continuity in environmental efforts. Khan Ayaan Abdulla and Mohd. Huzaifa Khan, the Founders and Directors of YOUTH Creative Minds Hub, stresses how the youth bring fresh perspectives, innovative ideas, and unwavering enthusiasm, making them powerful agents of change. By engaging youth in this mission, YCM Hub provides them with a platform to contribute meaningfully and shape their own futures.

What is the best tool you can use to express yourself and bring a change? Art. Art has the remarkable ability to captivate, provoke emotions, and ignite conversations. It transcends language and cultural barriers, making it an ideal medium to raise awareness about climate change. Through visual arts, cultural performances, installations, and an interactive exhibition, the ASAS will create a unique atmosphere that promotes dialogue and reflection. It will encourage visitors to retrospect their actions on the environment and inspire them to adopt a sustainable lifestyle.

YCM Hub and Funun Arts Group, the driving force behind this grand event, consists of a dedicated team of youth ambassadors, mentors, schools and universities partners. These passionate individuals and institutions are committed to fostering a sense of environmental stewardship and sustainable practices within the Gulf region. Actively involved in organizing the art and culture show, ensuring that it becomes a transformative experience for all participants.

Participating in the Gulf's largest art and culture show offers students a unique opportunity to become catalysts for change by being part of the art exhibition and competition, masterclasses and workshops, youth speaker forum and panel discussions, cultural performances, and so much more over two days. Shiba Khan and Farah Khan, Founders of Funun Arts Group promise this event to be a groundbreaking one that combines art, culture, and environmental awareness. Through the theme 'We Can Change Climate Change', the ASAS will inspire and empower youth to take action against climate change and unleash their creativity.

With the team of 30+ art mentors, 15 Youth ambassadors, almost 50 student volunteers, 40+ supporting partners from different fields and 700 + participating students, let us come together in October to celebrate this fusion of art and the power to change Climate change for once and for all.

The event will be hosted at the De Montfort University, Dubai. As an empowering British university, DMU has offered premier education since 1870. The branch campus in Dubai, commonly known as DMU Dubai, offers Foundation, Undergraduate, and Postgraduate programs in Engineering, Management, Design, Computing, Psychology, Law and more.
