"NANO TRILOGY III: NANO TARGETED VILLAGES" is a thrilling continuation of the Nano Trilogy series. In this installment, Criss introduces a new type of super macabre nanotech molecular system that proves to be both powerful and difficult to control. This offensive system is used to attack several villages, resulting in the loss of hundreds of innocent lives. The protagonists, now grown professionals, take it upon themselves to develop their own counter-molecular weapons program. With the help of American high-tech military weapons, including special molecular counter weapons, US military mini drones, witch's herbs, and trained poisonous snakes, they engage in battles in African villages, achieving critical victories. As the story unfolds, the musketeer team traces the industrial leader, Korrektorizer, from New York to Washington, D.C., to the Caribbean, and finally to Europe. They discover that he is responsible for their father's death, and revenge becomes their ultimate goal. However, the mystery deepens as a body is never found.
