Key highlights

Comprehensive technology law services

Progressive Legal's new suite of services encompasses a wide range of technology law areas, including data protection and privacy, intellectual property, cybersecurity, e-commerce, software as a service, crypto and regulatory compliance. The firm aims to be a one-stop destination for businesses seeking legal guidance in the rapidly evolving technology sector.

Experienced technology law team

The technology law team at Progressive Legal comprises seasoned legal professionals with a deep understanding of the legal challenges faced by businesses in the digital age. Their expertise enables them to provide tailored solutions that align with clients' specific needs and goals.

Client-centric approach

Progressive Legal is committed to a client-centric approach, ensuring that the unique needs of each client are understood and addressed. The firm believes in building long-term relationships based on trust, transparency and successful outcomes.

Ian Aldridge, Principal at Progressive Legal, commented on the new services, saying, "We really get it – technology is reshaping everything for businesses. We've been on the front foot since day one, not only in assisting technology-based clients but also in the relentless pursuit of integration of technology into the firm itself."

"We're at the unique age where we are old enough to remember when MS DOS came out and young enough to be keen to continue to learn and grasp new technologies like blockchain, crypto and the various softwares that businesses now use daily."

"We find the traditional law firm doesn't understand or want to learn. We do. It can be confronting but we know the ups and downs, and we're here to make sure legal support isn't a roadblock but a helping hand."

"Our tech law services give businesses the power to navigate the digital environment with confidence and thrive by bringing their innovations to life."
