

Amazing Love Stories For Valentine's Day

From The Bedroom To The Boardroom... And Beyond! “sensational read”. When did you first fall in love and why? Indeed, love stories emerge for different reasons.

Brisbane, Queensland Feb 1, 2024 (IssueWire.com) - Why did William Shakespeare marry Anne Hathaway who was eight years older than him? Why did Napoleon, the most powerful man in France marry Josephine who he knew had many previous lovers?

How did Cassanova manage to have so many relationships without marrying? Why did many women agree to become mistresses, rather than press for marriage. Madame de Pompadour's long-term relationship with King Louis XV is one example amongst many?

February 14th is Saint Valentine's Day, which commemorates love between people.

“Amazing Love Stories” is a unique e-book that explores the eternal question of love. What drew these people together and what pulled them apart? Was it just basic sexual attraction or something more?

Researching Love Stories

Instead of trying to analyse the issues in psychoanalytical form, another approach can be used. It is called a BioView®. This is a combination of a biography and an interview where people ‘travel’ through time to tell their story. Author and Psychologist, Dr. Charles Margerison, travelled back in time and conducted virtual interviews with a number of Amazing People about their relationships.

One of the stories is about Marina Gamba who had three children with Galileo, the great scientist, even though he refused to marry her! Another tells of Sally Hemings, a slave girl, and describes her relationship with Thomas Jefferson, President of America, with whom it is said she had six children!

Beauty Lies In The Eyes Of The Beholder

In return, how would the men have described the relationships? Dr Margerison represents the two points of view. “Beauty lies in the eye of the beholder” is a saying that has been around for a long time. It seeks to explain not only what people like in the form of art or design, but also in relationships.

Our inner world of what we like determines what we try to find in love. In choosing our friends and partners, we look for people who are attractive to us in some way. They may be knowledgeable, skilled or they may look beautiful to us, but not to others. We put a value on what we see and hear. What one person sees as attractive in another, is a source of fascination. Magazines and news are full of such stories.

A Matter For The Head Or The Heart

There are many poems, plays and songs that try to understand the many aspects of what we call love. Some say that love is not a matter for the head, but a matter for the heart. Another view is that love is part of the survival process, as mentioned by Charles Darwin in his great work.

Darwin's theory of evolution says that we are drawn to people who we feel will help us survive – not just physically in terms of reproduction, but also psychologically in terms of sharing interests and ideas.

In this way, love stories come in different forms and those in this 'Amazing Love Stories' e-book reveal many areas of attraction, from the bedroom to the boardroom and beyond. These BioViews® provide new insights into love and so can help you better understand your own life and relationships. Get your copy on Amazon today - makes for a great Valentine's Day gift - HERE.

© Dr. Charles Margerison Amazing People Worldwide – www.amazingpeopleworldwide.com

Media Contact

Amazing People Worldwide

marion@amazingpeopleworldwide.com

Source : Amazing People Worldwide

See on IssueWire