The New Media Film Festival®, celebrated for its cutting-edge content and strong support of creators, is thrilled to announce the Los Angeles premiere of "Rhino Man" at its upcoming 15th annual event. This feature-length documentary highlights the heroic efforts of field rangers in South Africa, who safeguard rhinos from extinction due to poaching.

"Rhino Man" offers an intimate glimpse into the high-stakes world of conservation, led by an insightful introduction from Prince William of Wales, whose dedication to environmental causes amplifies the film's message. The documentary, set against the stunning landscapes of South Africa, provides a poignant look at the struggles and triumphs of field rangers on the poaching frontline.

The film's poster is from Dutch artist Marcel van Luit and two legendary South African musical artists, Siphos Mchunu and Mandisa Dlanga, created the title track. The film is also lauded by the legendary primate researcher Dr. Jane Goodall.

"RHINO MAN highlights the immense debt we owe to Rangers, the true heroes in our efforts to protect the world's wildlife. Their courage and dedication are inspiring and will, I hope, encourage many to support their truly important work." ~ Dr. Jane Goodall, DBE, Founder of the Jane Goodall Institute & UN Messenger of Hope
