

Engage and Empower: Join the Conversation on Women's Impact in the 2024 Election

New York City, New York May 20, 2024 (IssueWire.com) - As the date draws near, we invite you to secure your spot at Dare to Run's impactful panel discussion on "Election 2024: How Gender Will Impact the Female Voter Turnout." Scheduled for June 13th, 2024, at the Houston Street Center in Lower Manhattan, this event promises to be a cornerstone for understanding and influencing the role of gender in the upcoming presidential election.

As the 2024 presidential election approaches, the role of gender in shaping electoral outcomes has never been more critical to understand and address. This panel discussion is not just timely; it is essential for forecasting the strategies that will define the next wave of political engagement.

With gender dynamics at the forefront of societal conversations, the insights from this discussion will equip attendees with the knowledge and perspective needed to navigate the complexities of voter behavior and policy influence in a pivotal election year. By focusing on the impact of gender, we delve into a fundamental aspect of democracy and empowerment, making this an unmissable event for those committed to shaping a more inclusive political landscape.

Hear from some of the most influential voices in the political and social justice spheres:

Jessica Douglas, well known Community Architect, will share insights on community involvement and the importance of active civic participation.

Joy Williams, renowned political strategist and President of the Brooklyn NAACP brings her extensive experience in driving voter engagement and shaping political dialogue.

Raven Robinson, CEO of PR2Politics, known for her strategic prowess in public relations and political campaigning, will discuss strategies to empower women in the political arena.

Moderated by Amanda Goodall, founder of The Job Chick and a board member of Dare to Run, this panel will delve into strategic discussions and offer actionable insights into how women can shape the future of political engagement.

Don't miss this opportunity to be part of a thought-provoking discussion that will explore the intersection of gender and politics, offering a unique perspective on the challenges and opportunities for female voters in the 2024 Presidential Election.
