

Michael Cashman, MD, Leading the Way in Occupational and Environmental Medicine Research at the University of Washington

Dedicated Dermatologist Dr. Cashman's Commitment to Public Health Shines Through Research and Advocacy Efforts

New York City, New York May 6, 2024 (IssueWire.com) - A prominent dermatologist, Dr. Cashman is affiliated with the University of Washington Environmental & Occupational Health Department in Seattle, Washington. With a strong educational background and a passion for preventive medicine, he is at the forefront of groundbreaking research aimed at improving the health and well-being of workers in high-risk industries.

Before embarking on his professional journey, he graduated with his medical degree from the George Washington University School of Medicine and Health Sciences in 2011 and completed his residency in dermatology at the Georgetown University Hospital in 2016. He then went on to complete his fellowship in Public Health and General Preventive Medicine at the University of Washington School of Public Health and Community Medicine. His dedication to occupational medicine was solidified during his post-graduate training, where he realized the potential to make a significant impact on a population-based scale.

Dr. Cashman's current focus on researching the incidence of cancers, including malignant melanoma, among firefighters in Washington state showcases his commitment to improving outcomes for those at high risk. His thesis project aims to shed light on how different insurance plans impact the timely access to treatment and the burden of disease among firefighters. By delving into these critical issues, he hopes to drive positive change in the care and support available to these frontline heroes.

Through his work with the University of Washington Environmental & Occupational Health Department, he has demonstrated a deep understanding of the complexities surrounding occupational health. His passion for preventive medicine and his unwavering dedication to public health make him a valuable asset to the field of dermatology and occupational medicine.
