

PoKos Awarded Major Patent for AAT™ — Anonymous Authentication Technology

Santa Fe, New Mexico Jun 10, 2024 (IssueWire.com) - PoKos Communications Corp announced today that it has received Patent No. 12/002,060 for its breakthrough anonymous authentication technology (AAT™). Users for the first time will be able to maintain their privacy and anonymity while communicating with others on devices equipped with PoKos AAT.

“We are so proud to win this race to anonymous authentication,” exclaims PoKos Founder and CEO Timo Platt. “This challenge has endured for almost 150 years, vexing the best minds in the industry,” Platt notes that a different type of competition will now take hold: the commercial will win customers, which in turn will drive AAT’s implementation by a wide range of businesses: communications carriers, device makers, internet service providers, health care providers, financial service firms, marketers and other organizations. “In the end,” Platt forecasts, “markets will embrace the solution because AAT serves their dual objectives of reliable authentication and optimizing user privacy.”

PoKos explains that it has achieved this unprecedented communications capability via an architecture of random and derivative keys serving as device identifiers to authenticate devices while preserving the privacy and anonymity of their users. “As we conceived our sixth-sense technology (SST™) platform more than a decade ago, we committed to achieving the highest levels of privacy protection while assuring reliable authentication, thereby enabling a broad range of important and diverse communications on the user’s terms,” Platt states.

About PoKos--The PoKos technology suite provides new methods and systems for users to maintain their privacy while holding important engagements with their doctors and financial advisors, in addition to maintaining social and commercial contact on their terms with marketers and other people around them – both nearby and around the globe.
