With a deep understanding of the intricacies of the RFE process, Sheila and her team are dedicated to helping individuals and organizations navigate the complexities of international credential recognition.

Understanding RFEs

A Request for Evidence (RFE) is a notice from the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) requesting additional information or documentation to support an application. RFEs can be issued for various reasons, including insufficient evidence of educational or professional qualifications, discrepancies in documentation, or unclear descriptions of credentials. Receiving an RFE can delay the processing of your application and may even result in a denial if not properly addressed.

Expert Opinion Letters

The team at www.thedegreepeople.com specializes in providing expert opinion letters designed to prevent and reverse RFEs. Their expert opinion letters offer an authoritative analysis of foreign educational credentials or professional experience, providing clear and detailed comparisons to U.S. standards.

These Letters are Essential for Preventing and Reversing RFEs

Their expert opinion letters are meticulously prepared to address the specific concerns that can lead or have lead to an RFE.

By providing comprehensive and accurate evaluations along with the expert letters, they help prevent RFEs from being issued in the first place. If an RFE has already been issued expert opinion letters can provide the necessary evidence to address the issues raised by USCIS, significantly increasing the likelihood of a positive outcome. They have a 92% approval rate for H2B and I140 filings.
