Everyone's gathered near Henry's pigsty with hopes to see Santa ride his sleigh through the sky. The night was like magic for everyone there until Scottie the Skunk left his scent in the air. But the spirit of Christmas was upbeat and strong and it changed all our hearts so we all got along.

Written in rhyme, author Mark Albini tells the story of what happened to Bobo the Mouse on Christmas Eve. The true spirit of Christmas came alive in everyone's heart on that heavenly night when the troublemakers were invited to join in the festivities.

In a recent interview on the America Tonight Radio Show, hosted by Emmy award-winner Kate Delaney, Albini shared his inspiration for the book and the joy of creating a story that celebrates friendship, unity, and the magic of the holidays.

ABOUT THE SERIES:

The Rescue Ranch is a fictional farm featuring typical farm animals such as horses, cows, barn mice, and rabbits, along with rescued animals from the zoo, including lions, tigers, bears, and giraffes.

The series began when an old man named Grandpa Eddie learned that the country zoo he visited as a boy was closing its doors. He decided to rescue the animals and bring them to Rescue Ranch, creating a unique environment where animals that would normally never become friends—such as a giraffe and a barn mouse or a frog and a hog—formed deep bonds. The animals depend on one another, showcasing friendship, honor, teamwork, and the Golden Rule.

Each book in the series is told in rhyme and ends with a different moral, lesson, good manners, or advice, continuously surprising and delighting readers.
