

Get Jazzy With Upstream and Their Soothing Blues

The acoustic trio of Upstream has gifted its fans with two of their best creations which are full of soothing blues and jazz tones to take listeners on a journey.

Bergen, Aug 14, 2024 (Issuewire.com) - Hailing from Amsterdam, Holland, the acoustic trio with singer Chaja van der Heide, guitarist André van Solinge & bass player Erik van der Heide making up the Upstream is here for their fans with two new hit tracks called 'Maybe' and 'Bumblebees'. The band is known for its acoustic adventures with slow beats and soothing melodies. They have created some beautiful covers of legendary music pieces from the '60s and '70s, with the touch of their unique flair along with some of the best original compositions which blend seamlessly with the covers. The first track, 'Maybe' is a cover from Alison Krauss & Union Station which they have created as a tribute to honor the legendary bluegrass and country artist. The undeniable sense of calmness and the relaxing vibes of the track are bound to put all the worries out of mind whenever a listener tunes in.

The eccentric acoustic guitar riffs and notes with a dash of blues and jazz accompany the lyricism immensely, making this track one of the top contenders if the audience wants to relax on a slow and peaceful evening. The second track by Upstream is called 'Bumblebees' and the name right away gives the vibe of nature. Just like the title the song is all about being present in nature and under the sun with a life blessed by the heavenly son and father. The positive lyrics along with the soulful guitar are an impeccable blend of happiness and peacefulness simultaneously. The band is set to perform at the 'Gezelligheid langs de Bosbaan' festival in July 2024 but for now, their songs can be streamed on Spotify and to get new updates fans are welcome to visit their social media profiles on Facebook.
