Can dreams survive tradition? What happens when a young girl's ambition meets cultural expectations?

Vancouver, British Columbia Aug 7, 2024 (IssueWire.com) - "Ejituru's Dream," the latest novel by Dr. Nwanganga Shields, follows the journey of Ejituru, an eighteen-year-old girl from Nigeria, whose dream of living in America and obtaining a medical degree takes an unexpected turn. Admitted to university, Ejituru's life is upended when her father arranges her marriage to an older man from their village, now an immigrant in America. This interesting story narrates her struggles and determination to achieve her aspirations despite the obstacles she faces.

In the opening chapter, Dr. Shields writes: "Ejituru stood in the courtyard of her late grandfather's spacious home, contemplating what lay ahead. She is a beautiful, tall, brown-skinned girl. Ejituru had led a sheltered life from the time she was born. She had attended the primary school where her mother was headmistress and now went to a prestigious girls' boarding school where she was under the protection of the principal, a friend of her mother's. Ejituru was a good student and was ready to put her secondary education behind her. She looked forward to going to university to become a doctor, determined not to let anything stand in her way. However, her father had been dropping hints that she needed to find a suitor..."

The novel has garnered praise from multiple review platforms. BlueInk Review commends the book, stating, "This well-paced book dramatizing the harm done by insisting on long-held traditions is imaginative and original."
