"It is beyond my passion to assist patients through the difficult journey of kidney transplant and educate them and their families about their disease," says Dr. Szewc. "My goal is not just to treat, but to provide a comprehensive education that fosters understanding and proactive management of their condition."

Originally from Poland, he earned his medical degree from the Medical School of Lublin, before completing his internal medicine residency at UMass Memorial Healthcare and served as Chief Nephrology Fellow at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio. He actively participates in various medical associations, including the American Medical Association, the American Society of Nephrology, and the Renal Physician Association, advocating for better kidney health initiatives and policies.
