

Kathleen Kearney, MD, Leads Advancements in Interventional Cardiology at UWMC Montlake

Medical Director of Cardiac Cath Lab Brings Expertise in Complex Procedures and Patient-Centered Care

New York City, New York Sep 19, 2024 (Issuewire.com) - An esteemed interventional cardiologist, Dr. Kearney serves as the Medical Director of the Cardiac Catheterization Laboratory at UW Medicine Montlake in Seattle, Washington. She is committed to implementing cutting-edge techniques in interventional cardiology, ensuring patients have access to the latest advancements in treatment options.

Academically, she completed her fellowship in interventional cardiology at the UW Division of Interventional Cardiology in 2018, following her cardiology fellowship in 2016 and her residency in internal medicine in 2012. She also holds a medical degree from the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine and is board-certified in internal medicine, cardiovascular disease, and interventional cardiology, reflecting her commitment to excellence in patient care.

As an Associate Professor of Medicine in the Division of Cardiology at the University of Washington School of Medicine, Dr. Kearney combines her clinical expertise with education, training the next generation of medical professionals in the evolving field of cardiology. Her areas of specialization include the management of chronic total occlusions (CTOs), coronary physiology, chest pain syndromes, and brachytherapy.

Believing in a collaborative approach to healthcare, she works closely with patients, their families, and other healthcare providers to achieve individualized health goals. “I strive to empower my patients through education and shared decision-making,” she said. “Together, we can navigate complex cardiovascular conditions and work towards optimal health outcomes.”
