

WRP Law Group, Stone Mountain to Heighten Focus on Medical Malpractice Cases Especially Fatal Diagnosis

Leading law firm, WRP Law Group, based in Georgia's Stone Mountain, is expanding its focus on medical malpractice cases buoyed by its impressive track record in winning such difficult cases.

Stone Mountain, Georgia Sep 17, 2024 (Issuewire.com) - The law firm's CEO added that medical malpractice attorney Stone Mountain treats such cases not as something borne of negligence but as stemming from a disregard for human rights, a lack of empathy, and a reflection of the lag in the best practices in the industry.

As far as WRP Law Group is concerned, it has a record of fighting cases that had prima facie no chance of success. Wrong diagnosis of many life-threatening diseases is taking a big toll of lives and costs.

Examples include detecting various cancers. Cancer care calls for better prognosis in the early stages, especially in breast and skin cancer.

Any delayed diagnosis of critical conditions can lead to stroke, paralysis, and coma. Diagnostic failure curbs the window for effective treatment, and chances of recovery become minimal, hiking the complexity of treatment, noted the CEO.

Common cases of malpractice

The CEO said in the coming days medical malpractice attorney Stone Mountain will accept more cases of medical malpractice covering failure to diagnose medical conditions correctly.

There will be a new focus on cases of victims of diagnostic errors that worsen patient outcomes and quality of life.

Such cases also include surgical errors and anesthesia errors; the suffering of mothers and kids from birth injuries has triggered a growing number of cases.

Then there are tragic prescription errors harming patients. There are also a number of medical malpractice cases where the negligence by hospital staff has been exposed.

More attorneys to join

The CEO of WRP Law Group added that it is planning to empanel more lawyers and specialist medical malpractice attorney Stone Mountain to handle the bulging number of medical error cases.

The logic behind taking up medical damage cases is to defend the rights of the victim who has suffered the harm due to medical malpractice and deserves wholesome compensation for his losses, such as lost wages, medical expenses, pain and suffering, and all other ancillary costs.

Swift litigation

The CEO noted that the success rate in medical malpractice cases by the law firm has been due to its efforts in educating the public that acting quickly is the safest way to a successful outcome.

For medical malpractice attorney Stone Mountain, waiting too long will be counterproductive, as the statute of limitations for medical malpractice cases varies in different states. Also, delay will lead to loss of evidence, and witnesses may not remember details, making the case very weak.

The CEO added that medical malpractice attorneys Stone Mountain with WRP Law Group have the experience and resources to pursue cases with a strong legal strategy, and plaintiffs can expect a responsive service until the closure of the case.
