The annual ranking of America's Best Addiction Treatment Centers relies on several key criteria, including service quality, accreditation, and reputation. Thousands of healthcare professionals, such as therapists, counselors, physicians, and addiction specialists, participated in a comprehensive survey to offer expert recommendations. We assessed quality metrics that emphasize the effectiveness of substance use disorder rehab programs and used data from the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) to verify accreditations and certifications.

The selection committee also evaluated:

- Peer Recommendations: Thousands of healthcare professionals—including therapists, counselors, physicians, and addiction treatment staff—shared expert recommendations through an extensive online survey.
- Quality of Care: Participants rated programs using various quality metrics, focusing on those that most influence rehabilitation program effectiveness.
- Accreditations: certifications and accreditations, such as Joint Commission accreditation (JACHO), were factored into the rankings, ensuring that only the best facilities were recognized.

"We are honored to receive this national recognition," stated Emily Meyers, CEO of Longbranch Recovery & Wellness. "This achievement truly reflects the dedication and passion of our outstanding team.
